This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE

With the issuance of this, the fifth biennial edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, the publishers feel warranted in the belief that the publication has achieved a world-wide recognition as something fixed and requisite. It has settled into its place and appears to be generally accepted as, in one field, indispensable. This has been the end sought in the publication of the work from the beginning and its attainment is not only gratifying but, necessarily, an incentive toward maintaining and, if possible, excelling the standard already reached.

An especial source of regard and gratification are the hundreds of kindly letters, either of compliment or suggestion, which have been received not only from all parts of the United States but also from abroad, and the words of commendation which have appeared and are continually appearing in the public prints. The approval of the thousands to whom WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA has been of practical and personal value, added to that of the press, constitutes a verdict which is sufficient. The verdict has been one rendered by a jury than which none with swifter and keener perceptions could be found in all the world, and it has been promptly and generously rendered.

The information which WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA alone possesses makes the book a practical necessity for almost every intelligent person. Under many demanding circumstances it is the only resort; in newspaper offices it is as essential as a map or dictionary, and to writers it is, naturally, an aid and a companion. It is found in libraries, where all seek information, throughout the length and breadth of the land, and there occupies a place well to the front, where it is readily accessible. Inquiry was recently made at one of the principal libraries of the United States as to what book is most frequently called for. "That's the book," was the reply of the librarian, pointing to a well thumbed copy of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, on a shelf near the front railing. "We keep it there so as to save time. The person who wants the book can reach it for himself." The work has come into such general demand as a book of reference that in many of the greater libraries dozens of copies have become necessary, several requiring at least forty to fifty copies each of each edition. In educational institutions it has its recognized place, as a matter of course. The faculties of schools and colleges have awakened to an appreciation of its value as a means of inspiring pupils to higher ambitions and attainments. Business houses have learned to appreciate the novel merits of the work and it has a value especially its own to all interested in men and women and affairs of the day.

It is pleasant and perhaps not out of place to allude in this connection to a fact which is most gratifying. So general has become reliance upon the accuracy of statements appearing in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA that not infrequently it is accepted as the authority by which may be determined mooted questions as to details in the careers of noted men, such as the facts regarding age or birthplace, or data of the sort. A somewhat striking illustration of this was afforded during the presidential campaign of 1904 when a discussion arose between certain newspapers as to the age of Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate. The authority accepted was WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, and Judge Parker was appealed to for confirmation as to its accuracy, a confirmation freely given. Always data may be relied upon which are gained, as in this publication, directly from the fountain-heads.

The value of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, as recognized from the beginning, depends upon discrimination in the selection of names. The measure of exclusiveness heretofore observed in their insertion must be maintained absolutely, otherwise the book would lose its special quality. It must be exactly what it professes to be, else the salt will have lost its savor. Not always is this essential comprehended by persons who think their names should appear in the book. Human nature has, in some instances, been manifested in a striking way by direct applications for places in the volume. "What are the requirements for the insertion of my name?" or "What will it cost me?" have been the burden of many of these communications. Some have the mistaken idea that an order for a copy of the book accompanying personal data is all that is required, while others, now familiar with the program of the publishers of certain so-called biographical dictionaries, imagine that the payment of a certain set price per line will secure the end desired. Others, local celebrities, in all earnestness think themselves entitled to admission, as do their admiring friends. In answer to all such inquiries it may be stated that fitness alone is the test for admission. Every name must measure up to the prescribed standard. Wealth, ancestry and social position are not essential factors for securing admission to WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. Names may and do appear of those who are broadly prominent in some special field but who are little known in their own communities. The local celebrity is well known personally; the man of great achievement may be scarcely known at all in the particular locality in which he lives. The national character is frequently he whose work is better known than himself, and it is pertinent personal information concerning such an individual that it is the mission of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA to gather and disseminate. The man or woman whose achievements are widely known in any worthy line of effort is the one who meets the qualifications for appearance in its pages. Not a line of paid matter has ever been admitted to any but the regular advertising pages at the end of the volume. Not a single sketch has been paid for—and none can be paid for. Not even a subscription for a copy of the book is obligatory, though the publishers are frank in the admission that they have entertained the hope that every name might represent the sale of at least one copy of each edition. Of a different turn of mind, however, seems to be the man who bought a copy of the first edition, issued more than eight years ago, and who writes as follows: "I purchased a copy of your valuable book several years ago and have found it exceedingly useful. It answers my purpose so well I shall not require a copy of your new edition."

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA has passed through four revisions and enlargements since the edition referred to by our correspondent was issued, the number of names has been more than doubled, over 2,000 deaths have been recorded, and probably not one of the original sketches has been retained without material changes.

Holding a still different view is one who says: "I find WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA indispensable in my work and resort to it almost daily for some important item of information. I do not see how I could get along without it. I do not, however, feel the need of subscribing for a new edition, as I can borrow it from my nearest neighbor." The special personal advantages attaching to the inclusion of a name in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA are generally recognized and appreciated and are so apparent that they need not be enumerated. This has been attested by thousands of appreciative letters. Probably one of the unusual ways in which the book is used is related by a distinguished traveler, who says he carries the book with him in his travels and has frequently consulted it to great advantage when about to meet persons known to him only by reputation. An eminent scholar writes: "I feel deeply grateful to WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA on account of favors which I received from total strangers during a recent trip through Europe. The acquaintances made were among the pleasantest experiences of the year and were due entirely to the sketch which appears in the book issued by you."

It is recognized that benefit pertains to the insertion of a name, not merely in a social but in a general and business way. Socially, WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA is not necessarily a "Burke's Peerage" nor a "Debrett's Book," for this is a democratic country, but the accompaniment of addresses enables all to place themselves in communication with any notable, for business or other purposes. To this benefit, such as its degree may be, those appearing in the book are certainly entitled by their achievements.

That this is notably the age of extraordinary young men is made clear by a perusal of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. As pertinent illustrations may be cited the brief but brilliant records already made by such men as Governor James H. Higgins of Rhode Island, who is now just past 32, but when elected for his first term was only 29; of William James Bryan of Florida, who was recently appointed to the United States Senate, and is 31 years of age. The "baby" member of Congress, born in 1880, is Harry B. Wolf of the 3d Maryland district, and Mayor Sherburne M. Becker of Milwaukee, 32 years old, is the chief executive of that city of nearly 300,000 people. In the book appear also the names of at least 13 others, men and women, born since 1880. To refer to the other extreme in age it may be mentioned that, since the death of the patriarch, Charles Haynes Haswell, May 12, 1907, at the advanced age of 98, examination has not been made regarding his successor to that title, but there are several who are more than 95 years of age.

And the elder are very much alive. The continuation in these pages of the story of their achievements makes the fact most tellingly apparent.

The convenient size of the volume has been steadfastly maintained from the beginning, when there were only 827 pages, though the present edition contains 2,400 pages. This has been accomplished by the use of a thinner though not less clean-colored and substantial sheet of paper and by mechanical adjustments necessary to retain the character of the book as a handy volume.

The first edition (1899-1900) contained 8,602 names; the second (1901-1902), 11,551 names; the third (1903-1905), 14,443 names; the fourth (1906-1907), 16,216 names. In the present edition the total number of names is 16,395, an increase since the appearance of the first issue of 7,793. Of the 16,216 names appearing in the fourth edition, 1,868 are omitted from the present edition. Of these, 756 are known to have died and their names are included in the cross references. Among the other 1,112 who have been dropped are some who were included because they then belonged to the arbitrary classification designated elsewhere. Being no longer in this classification they are omitted. In a number of instances names of persons have been omitted regretfully because most careful inquiry has failed to secure the data now required concerning them. The number of new names added to the present volume is 2,057.

Beginning with the first volume of this work, suggestions for possible improvement have been invited and responded to, with good results. Thousands of advisory letters have been received and the thoughtful promptings given have been acted upon, when not interfering with the general aim of the work or of such a character as to render its size unhandy. So, in the future, they will be looked for and will receive no less consideration.

Among the many suggestions that of indices in various forms has been presented. The practical utility of such additions has been apparent to the publishers for some time and it is believed that the "Geographical Index" incorporated in the present volume will prove a valuable addition.

This index comprises 136 pages (2135 to 2271 inclusive). Each name has been listed at least once and in instances where the business address and the residence are in different communities, twice, when it is so given in the sketch. There are thus 2,023 duplicate names in the index, which explains the difference between the number of names in the index and the number of sketches. The names for each state, city and postoffice have been so grouped that it may be readily ascertained who is and who is not "who" in any community.

It is inevitable that a work of this character should invite criticism, which, it may be added, is always welcome. Sometimes it is more than vigorous. At a recent teachers' institute, held in a southern state, a clergyman of some prominence, addressing the gathering, declared of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, "It is a vicious book, because it seeks to establish a man's worth in the world by the position he occupies." It was while discussing the value of education that the speaker made this reference, and while the degree of justice attaching to the developments of this particular "brain storm" may easily be left to popular judgment, the reference in such connection affords here occasion for allusion to the fact that WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA has a rank among educational forces in this country recognized by many of the highest authorities. Its statistics given in previous volumes are admittedly original and in fields before unworked.

Statistical tables which have appeared in various editions of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, compiled from data found in the book itself, have attracted wide comment and furnished a basis for articles of general interest by experts in sociology. The most complete tabulated presentation of these statistics appeared in the edition for 1903-1905, comprising statements in regard to education, birth and residence, age and marriage. A general resumé of the tabulated statistics of the first three volumes was given in Vol. 4 (1906-1907), which illustrated in a striking way the usefulness of the book in the study of a number of interesting problems. One of the questions often discussed as a result of these statistics is the value of education in the attainment of success in life. Taking it for granted that WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA contains the names of the leaders in various important lines of activity, the statistical tables present a conclusive argument in favor of higher education. The tables show that 69.76 per cent of the persons listed in the edition for 1903-1905 (who furnished the necessary data) had the advantage of college training. Of this number, 56.03 per cent were college or university graduates and 14.61 per cent had attended universities and colleges but were not graduated. It will be seen that more than half of the names represent college graduates. As these figures indicate results varying less than one per cent from those of detailed information secured by careful examination of earlier volumes, it has not been considered essential to go over the same ground in the two subsequent issues. This is an argument, in a nutshell, in favor of higher education; and the continued growth of schools for advanced instruction is evidence that the practical value of education in shaping one's career is deeply recognized by the American people.

It is interesting to note, aside from figures relating to persons having advantage of collegiate training, that 12.29 per cent were educated in academies, seminaries and other secondary schools, 1.50 per cent finished their education in normal schools, 3.48 per cent graduated from public high schools, 9.76 per cent had common school education, 3.92 per cent were privately educated and 0.21 per cent were self taught. The statistics show that a very large majority of those attaining the highest grades of scholarship were products, originally, of the public and high schools which an advanced civilization has placed within reach of every boy or girl in the land.

Any person desiring to go further into this subject will find the present volume an inviting field for independent research.

Statistics as to the age of those appearing in the 1903-1905 volume show that the average age of the women was 50.57 years and of the men 53.38 years. Considering the fact that many of the new names are those of young men and women—born since 1860—a deduction from the present volume would probably show that the average age has been somewhat reduced.

An article based on statistics of marriage also appears in the 1903-1905 edition. It is shown that 91.81 per cent of the men and 62.90 per cent of the women were married. Otherwise stated, 88.92 per cent of the entire number of both sexes were married and 11.08 per cent unmarried. The average age at marriage for men was 28.70 years and for women 25 years. About one out of thirty of the men are bachelors and one out of three of the women are spinsters.

For the information of those who are not familiar with the rule governing the selection of names in this volume, it may be stated that seeming incongruities may in a measure be accounted for by the arbitrary admission of a certain class of names; and it should also be explained that although many are admitted because of positions temporarily occupied, a great majority in the arbitrary class would be admitted without hesitation even if they did not belong to that class, because of a personal record not at all dependent upon present official place.

It should be borne in mind, as well, that the names in this volume are either of Americans themselves or of those so closely identified with American affairs as to be subjects here of inquiry or discussion. Thus, foreign ambassadors and ministers accredited to the United States and some of those who, by frequent visits, or otherwise, have become subjects of interest in this country are properly included. The arbitrary list contains the names of all members of Congress; all governors of States, Territories, and island possessions of the United States now in office; all United States judges; all judges of State and Territorial Courts of highest appellate jurisdiction; members of the Cabinet; Federal Department heads; all officers of the Army above the rank of Colonel, and of the Navy above the rank of Captain; all American ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary; heads of all the larger universities and colleges; members of the National Academy of Sciences and of the National Academy of Design; heads of the leading national societies devoted to educational and scientific aims; bishops and chief ecclesiastics of all the larger religious denominations in the United States; and others who are in like manner chosen because of their official relations and affiliations.

Notwithstanding the steady improvement shown in each successive edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA and the fact that defects have been remedied, imperfections eliminated and new features from time to time introduced, adding greatly to the usefulness and value of the book, it is realized that the book has not yet reached perfection. Necessarily, the volume will expand with future editions.

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA has the responsibility of standing alone in its field. To improve it constantly, to meet each new requirement, is the intention of its publishers.

In the foregoing table are listed the 52 states and territories, including Alask Hawaii, Indian Territory (now part of Oklahoma) and Porto Rico, the Distri of Columbia, the Philippine Islands, and 76 foreign countries as locations of bir or residence of persons whose names appear in the present volume.

Of the total number of 16,395 names listed, 14,222 or 86.07 per cent, a natives of the United States, 1,753 or 13.03 are of foreign birth, 4 were born sea and 416 do not report as to place of birth. For the sake of comparison it m be stated that of persons whose names appear in the 1906-1907 edition, 89.10 p cent were native and 10.90 per cent were foreign born.

New York state contributes 2,827 natives and stands at the head of the li followed by Massachusetts with 1,650, Pennsylvania with 1,427, Ohio with 1,11 Next follows Illinois with 649, Connecticut with 510 and Maine with 491. Oth states contributing more than 200 to the list are Indiana, Virginia, New Jerse Vermont, Maryland, Michigan, Kentucky, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Missouri, a Iowa, in the order named. New York state also leads in number of residents, bei credited with 4,122, followed by Massachusetts with 1,605, Pennsylvania with 1,18 District of Columbia with 1,228, Illinois 1,045, and other states contributing more tha 200 to the list are Ohio, California, New Jersey, Connecticut, Missouri, Marylan Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Virginia in the order named. The lar figures for the District of Columbia are due to concentration of government of cials and employes at the National Capital and the fact that most of the army a navy officers are addressed there; senators and congressmen are accredited their home states.

In regard to present residence, 15,873 live in the United States, its territori or possessions, 496 reside abroad and the present address of 13 is not known. C those of foreign birth, England is credited with 356, Germany 329, Canada 28 Ireland 165 and Scotland 126. There are 89 whose present residence is in En land, 74 in France, 34 in Germany and in Italy, 29 in Canada, 26 in China and 21 i Cuba. Panama, which, in the 1906-7 edition, was credited with 6 persons, has in the present volume, owing to increased activity on the great canal now course of construction.

The comparison of figures indicates clearly that the trend of activity decidedly westward; that is, the majority of the eastern states whose roster c natives is large, have a smaller number of residents, and most of the wester states whose natives are few have a larger number of residents. This is strikingl illustrated by the State of Colorado, which has only 2 native sons in the li against 162 residents, and Montana, which has 1 native in the list and 42 resident The most evenly balanced of the states as between their birth and resident lists i Tennessee, which has 190 in each column. Indiana has 48 more natives in th present edition than in the preceding one, a larger gain than any other state.
